Princes of the Yen: (Duration 93 mins-Video)

Central banks have the power to create economic, political and social change. This is how they do it." This passage opens the film, and that is precisely what non-partisan political and socio-economic documentarian group QueuePolitely puts under the microscope in the Princes of the Yen.

Based on a book by Professor Richard Werner, a visiting researcher at the Bank of Japan during the 90s crash, during which the stock market dropped by 80% and house prices by up to 84%. The film uncovers the real cause of this extraordinary period in recent Japanese history.

Making extensive use of archival footage and TV appearances of Richard Werner from the time, the viewer is guided to a new understanding of what makes the world tick. And discovers that what happened in Japan almost 25 years ago is again repeating itself in Europe. To understand how, why and by whom, watch this film.

The Great Challenge - Oil: (Duration 47 mins-Video)

The sleepless economy of America with the population of 350 million is busy producing and consuming day and night. The full manifestation of modern capitalism, which is the focus of worried glances from all over the world, has drowned the feelings of the children of past immigrants and present residents of the United States in a spectacular ecstasy or visual beauties and pleasures.

The driving force of this enormous economic wheel is only one thing - oil. U.S. oil consumption is about 25% of the world's total oil consumption. Despite this voracious appetite the United States oil reserves account for only 5% of the world's total reserves. Experts believe that the country's reserves will come to an end in 15 years.

U.S. governments has been built on the basis of a strategic concept that was stated clearly by neoconservative thinkers that the US needed to prevent its potential competitors from becoming powerful in order to maintain the stroll as the dominant power in the world and that was not possible without strengthening America's military power and the domination over oil resources.

Why are We all in Debt: (Duration 26 mins-Video)

The documentary film Why are We All in Debt? provides a 26 minute introduction to the crucial facts on money and banking that every layman should know. Using simple terminology and clear graphics, the film explains why the current financial system inevitably produces boom and bust, endemic inflation and unrepayable debt. Emphasizing both Muslim and Christian viewpoints, the film is highly suited for use in inter-faith discussion groups, and as an educational tool for new students who are not satisfied with mainstream explanations of financial economics. The range of topics includes fractional reserve banking, the difficulties arising in an economy that is heavily reliant upon interest-based financing, religious attitudes to usury past and present, and alternative models of monetary management.
